

A Journey of Inspiration & Motivation

Hello friends, my name is Josh Hinds. The following is a collection of my commentaries from my daily "Inspiration a Day!" e-zine. It is sent out for FREE to anyone who wishes to be inspired. I also offer another e-mail newsletter called "Let's Talk Motivation! If you'd like to join it either newsletter you may do so by clicking here (note: you need to actually be online at the time that you click the links in this ebook for them to work).

Each day I get a number of requests asking how "The Inspiration a Day!" began, so for all of you I will go ahead and tell you how it was started.

I first became interested in Motivational thinking around about the age of 16. You see the summer before I turned 16, I started working for my father. He was an entrepreneur in the truest sense of the word and was in the process of growing a Mortgage Brokerage business.

Needless to say not too many people would take a kid seriously, so I was placed in the tele-marketing dept. To everyone's surprise I managed to set an appointment on my very first night! Later this one conversation resulted in me making more money than I had ever seen in my life up to that point! It is safe to say that I was enthralled in the world of business from that very moment.

It wasn't until about 2 ½ months later that one of the sales people at the office turned me onto a motivational author by the name of Zig Ziglar. The book was Over the Top! And from that very moment my life would never be the same! Believe me friends I know that might sound a bit extreme but I assure you that is exactly the way it happened.

Throughout the coming months I simply absorbed just about any motivational or inspirational book that I could find! To say that this way of thinking became my life would be an understatement. Along the same time the thought of becoming a motivational speaker grew into a full blown obsession! I tried and tried to find an in road into the Motivational Speaking arena, but found out rather quickly that just as anything it is a business! And as such can be a bit difficult to break into.

All along I had been very interested in the Internet and the many possibilities that it afforded someone with limited resources. Then the idea hit me like a Wabash cannonball! I could use the Internet to give me my needed window of opportunity into the Motivational industry.

At first I sent out various e-mails to members of the motivational community. All were quite supportive but very few offered any real helpful ideas. Then I decided to start an e-mail daily newsletter called "The Inspiration a Day!" Wow! Here would be my opportunity to share my message with anyone who was interested in subscribing and best of all I could offer it for FREE while at the same time not breaking my own bank! Since then I am happy to report that the list has grown into a wonderful community of like minded motivational thinkers! Complete with a web site called The Motivational Mecca! (aka GetMotivation.com)

What follows is an archive of several of the Inspiration a Day! Lists. I have also added several other inspiring stories and commentaries for your enjoyment.

May each of your days be blessed with more success each day than the last!

To Your Success, Josh Hinds

Accomplishing your dreams is a process, not something that happens over night. Often we get discouraged because we don't think we are making progress, and the next thing we know we have veered away from that goal. The key is to plan a course for how we want to achieve our goals. And each and every day, take a few steps closer towards our goal...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

One of the easiest ways to succeed is to watch what other successful people are doing, and then take it a step further! I enjoy reading the biographies of these folks, not so much for the literary value as what I may learn about the person.

Daily Commentary

One of the surest roads I have found that leads to personal success is in doing something that you would do even if you didn't get paid for it! I have found that there are things that I just enjoy doing more than others. From time to time I like to look at these things and see how I could make it produce an income for me.

Please understand that when I say it's the easiest way to success what I mean is that since you enjoy doing it you won't mind putting the hard work into it necessary to succeed. A perfect example of me doing something that I would do for free anyway is that I enjoy working with computers, so it only seemed natural that I would offer computer tutoring services and Internet consulting. Another example is what I am doing with the Motivational Mecca!

it takes lots of time to keep it up and running, but I genuinely believe in the power of motivational thinking, so I don't count the hours involved.

Recently the site has evolved into working towards getting paying sponsors. The IAD List is something that I truly enjoy and as a direct result of the time I have spent to develop it, it is now growing beyond what I could have imagined possible. Friends, if you do not do but one thing in your life, I hope that it will be to do something that you enjoy...Your friend in cyberspace,

Tell the people closest to you how much you care -- This seems such a simple task, yet for whatever reason we all neglect to do this at times. I have found that when I make a conscious effort to tell someone how much I appreciate them, I am not only making their day brighter, I am also inadvertently brightening the day of the next person they come into contact with!

It really does have an amazing snowballing effect. To say that by practicing this technique you could eventually make the world a brighter place might be overdoing it a bit, but hey, we have to start somewhere don't we? :-)

The truth is that what the eventual outcome is really doesn't matter as much as the immediate effect it has on that person.

Take the time to notice those that are important to you, and most importantly don't hold back your feelings! Tell them why they are important to you. You'll feel a lot better and you will certainly have done your part to make their day a bit brighter!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Daily Commentary

Surround yourself with people who support you -- This is more commonly referred to as mentoring. Call it whatever you like, but the more people you can network with the better off you will be.

However, when you are developing your network make sure to choose your members wisely. One of the most disruptive things that can keep us from our success is to allow someone who is either too cynical or just plain doesn't believe you can accomplish what you set out to do! Often it's not that these folks are being mean, it is that for whatever reason over the years their experiences have given them this outlook on life. Perhaps they listened to those who said they couldn't do it.

At any rate the most important thing to do is to choose only the highly motivated people you come into contact with. I am not saying that you should avoid the negative folks, but I am saying that they definitely should not be the ones you consult with before pursuing your next goal! Friends, encourage them to the best of your ability, but don't let them steal your dreams from you in the process...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Failure is not the end of the world -- At some point in our lives we have all been face to face with failure. Simply put, anyone who has been successful has also experienced failure in their lives.

The key to success is not in how many times we fail at something. Rather it is in our ability to identify what went wrong, what we will do differently next time, and above all else our ability to get right back to the act of achieving our goals.

Failure is life's greatest teacher, embrace your failures, it is through facing them that takes us each one step farther towards our dreams!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Daily Commentary

Practice filling your mind with positive thoughts -- I have found that one of the most wonderful techniques to assure myself of a wonderful day is to fill my mind with positive aspirations! It really works, think about it, rarely do we start our day feeling bad.

What happens instead is that as the day progresses one unpleasant situation leads to another and before we know it we have written the day off as a bad day. What I propose is to simply head those feelings off at the pass. Start out by noticing the wonderful things in your life, what will happen is that instead of the negatives compounding you can actually reverse the process and get those positive feelings flowing!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Just tell'em you care! -- This is one of the easiest, yet most often overlooked things we can do. Realizing that all to often I inadvertently overlook those I care about, I began the practice of writing or calling (better yet, e-mailing) at least three of my friends or colleagues a week.

While each of us comes into contact with so many people on a day to day basis it is far too easy to lose touch with folks. By practicing this technique I not only build friendships, I also strengthen existing ones.

It's easy, I am not saying that you have to spend thirty minutes each with these folks, as a matter of fact the content isn't half as important as you making the effort to say "hello"! It will be appreciated more than you will ever know. As we get older I find that the overall quality of our relationships with our friends tends to deteriorate. This doesn't have to be the case! By taking the time to stay in contact and developing these friendships we will all be the better off!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Whether we are aware of it or not, we are all blessed with any number of wonderful ideas in any given week. What happens far too often however is that we ponder for a bit about the idea. We even plan a bit about what it would take to make it work, and for whatever reason we never take the most important step. The step that makes it all happen, that is we don't *act* on it! In every case I have studied there is one common factor that allows one person to reach their goals and another just reaching. That is that the successful person allowed themselves to be "lead" by the idea!

Friends, if something is good enough to cross your mind, there is a wonderful chance that you will be successful in it! However, one thing is for certain, if you never act you will never reach your goal!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

For those of you who are new to the list, and have not heard me speak of the importance that I place on developing my "network" or "mentors", then get ready because I am on my soap box now :-). Today, I was reminded again of the value of having success driven people in your group.

You see, recently I have begun trying to grow the "Inspiration a Day!" by looking for avenues to have it syndicated in print newspapers, in addition to offering it through this list. I feel strongly about its mission, and don't want someone to miss out just because they aren't on-line yet. At any rate, while the e-mail list is growing rapidly, the effort towards getting it in print was getting to be a bit discouraging (see friends, even I get frustrated sometimes :-)) Well, while I was sending out a follow up letter to an editor, I received an unexpected letter from a friend named Steve Eads (He is a Financial Planner, and one of my personal mentors) The note he sent came at such a needed point that I have decided to include it for you to read. The important thing here is to remember that he had no idea that I was even pursuing this goal, much less feeling discouraged, but by an amazing coincidence I got this e-mail today!

Hope you can use:

No, there is no failure for the man (woman) who realizes his (her) power, who never knows when he (she) is beaten; there is no failure for the determined endeavor, the unconquerable will. There is no failure for the man (woman) who gets up every time he falls, who rebounds like a rubber ball, who persists when everyone else gives up, who pushes on when everyone else turns back. --Orison Swett Marden

From Steve Eads.

To say that this got me fired up again would be an understatement! :-) You see by developing our "networks" they will in turn motivate us even when they aren't aware that we need it!...Friends, develop your networks and your life will inevitably be better for it!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Daily Commentary

The most wonderful, yet at the same time frustrating things in life is that we can't predict our success in something. Sure we can plan and do the necessary research to raise our chances of success. However, when it's all said and done it tends to be the person with the most persistence that gets the prize of success!

When you find yourselves in trying times as we all do, remind yourself of the blessing that you will receive as result of your persistence. My friends, it's a fact that while you don't have to be the smartest to succeed, you do have to be the most persistent.. May all your goals be fulfilled...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Sometimes in our busy lives we inadvertently cut off those that are closest to us. As much as I try to be available to the people I care about I must admit that at times I become distant. It's not that it is something that we mean to do, it is as though we are programmed to move ninety to nothin' and in our effort to do as much as possible we sometimes neglect those that really are important to us.

Recently I have had such a situation happen to me. You see I have a dear friend (who I won't name) that I have lost touch with. Upon reflection I am realizing that the cause was do to the fact that I was letting my busy schedule run my life. As of today I am making a conscious effort to recognize those that I have been blessed to know. While my time is limited I still must make an effort to be my own master rather than letting my efforts control me.

How can we do this you ask? What I suggest is that we first post a list of those we want to stay in regular contact with (put it in a place that's handy, I will set it by my computer). Each and everyday, contact these people, even if it's just to say "hi". Second, I plan to be a better manager of my time. Each day I several projects that I know I have to do, so I am going to allot myself a dedicated time to get these things done.

I hope that if you are having the same scenario in your life that you will consider these tips. Also, please if you have any ideas you'd like to share with me, please let me know...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

The only thing that determines where we wind up with regards to our goals are the steps that we take towards them. Ever since I became interested in motivational thinking, I have wanted to play a part in it. I used to dream of being a motivational speaker. However, for whatever reason I never acted on my dream.

Then about a year or so I finally realized that it wasn't just miraculously going to happen. If I truly wanted to put my goal into action I had to start! So I made a plan, I started by placing some motivational quotes on my main web page. Shortly after I began offering the "Inspiration a Day!" at the time the list was anything but a regular occurrence.

You see I knew what I wanted, but I hadn't been giving it my full attention. Then I decided that I owed it to myself as well as the list's members, to give it more effort. As a result the "Inspiration a Day!" has grown ever since.

Now that little page of quotes has grown into the "Motivational Mecca!" we have experienced a wonderful amount of traffic on the site. It has truly been a blessing. And most recently we have had the opportunity to expand into "print newspaper".

I cringe to think what would've happened had I not taken those first awkward steps. Friends, when I began this journey I had no idea what the end result would be, I still don't. However, because I was willing to take that leap of faith I have been extremely fortunate to date. I encourage you to follow your dreams, you will never know where your roads will lead you unless you first try!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Out of all the e-mail I receive from my on-line friends, particularly members of this list. The most common question tends to be "Josh, how do you keep up your attitude?" First, I have to say that like most of you, I do have times in my life that are overwhelming.

That's just a simple fact of life. Now to answer the question, posed to me. I have developed a simple plan to aid me in keeping up my positive attitude. Some time ago I heard a very interesting quote, "a person is just about as happy as they make up their mind to be". I have to tell you that the first time I heard this I was anything ,but impressed. I thought, what a foolish thing to think. How could someone say that I wasn't trying to be happy?

Luckily this quote had gotten into my subconscious, I pondered it and began to wonder what it's author had meant by it. I found the idea interesting that if maybe this person was right, I could somehow take an active role in my own happiness. The thought of this was simply overwhelming. Upon thinking about it's meaning I realized that it wasn't so much that I could say "shazam! now I am happy" as much as I could put simple things into place that would help me to develop my own happiness.

One of the things I do on a daily basis is to feed my brain with positive affirmations. Another thing I do is to read stories about people who have overcome adversities to achieve what they desired. I find it a constant journey in developing ways to keep my attitude up. By far one of the best ways I have found to keep myself going is to help others up and to discover the power of motivational thinking. There is simply nothing as rewarding as giving freely of ourselves...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Sometimes we all feel as though we are not getting as much as we would like done. I used to feel this way quite often, until I came to realize that success is a journey that's road is built one step at a time. Upon realizing this I pondered how I might go about laying more "success bricks" faster.

I came up with a plan where each day I tell myself that I will learn at least one thing about a subject that I didn't know about before. I have found that this allows me the daily feeling of having accomplished a particular thing each day. The most important step in this exercise, is that at the end of each day I remind myself of what I have learned. As a result I go to sleep feeling a sense of accomplishment, and more importantly I wake up with this same feeling! Friends, it all starts with that first little step!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Quite possibly one of the strongest human traits is our ability to "will" our way to our goals! One has only to read the countless stories of individuals who against the odds reached their dreams. Contraire to what some might lead us to believe these folks are all around us.

I am not saying that they all have made a million dollars or own their own businesses. What I am saying is that to have succeed one only has to be able to set their sites on what they want to achieve and have the perseverance to see their goal through! Each of us has the ability to make a difference in someone else's life! Often times with something as simple as a smile or a friendly hello. I have found that since I began to give freely of my positive attitude I have been blessed in many way's, areas of my life have been enriched in ways that couldn't have been done otherwise.

For example the other day I received a referral to do some Internet consulting. It seemed that a member of this list, felt they could feel comfortable enough to refer me to a business associate of theirs. Please don't misunderstand me, this is **not** the reason I offer the "Inspiration a Day!". I offer it simply because I believe in the benefits of motivational thinking.

You see when we give freely of ourselves we are making a positive impact on others in ways that we could never imagine. Make Goals! -- If there's one thing I can't stress enough, it is the importance of making goals! However, having goals is not enough to assure you of success. You have to have regular sessions with yourself to review whether or not you are on your way towards achieving that which you want.

Personally I try to take about 15 minutes every three days to review my goal sheet, and yes I do have my goals on paper. Here's a rule I try to practice in my daily life. "Don't ever say anything about another that you wouldn't be willing to tell them to their face". This sounds simple, but how many of us are guilty of talking bad about others? This is something I have to constantly remind myself to practice.

Yesterday I had a funny experience happen to me. I went into a convenience store, the same store that I always do. And as I was checking out I dropped off a few business cards by the register. As I was leaving the check out girl said to me as she was looking at my card "Josh, how is that every time you come in here you are always so happy?"

I have to admit that this was a pretty awkward question to be asked. Without even thinking I said "I guess because it just beats the alternative" and smiled. Then as I was driving on the way home I began to ponder this event a bit more. I now realize that whether we know it or not we are in a constant state of impression making. I would hate to think that someone might consider me as grumpy, or even worse unhappy!

However, inevitably throughout my life at some point I must have left another with this impression. *** My Commentary ***

All things happen for a reason -- I think that if I had .50 cents for every time someone said this to me I might be able to buy the whole world a Coke ( or Pepsi :- ) ). I know we have all heard this, it tends to surface in times of trouble or sorrow. I don't know if it is that saying this makes us believe that everything will be better or not.

I do know that I used to have a real hard time with this saying, particularly when it was used in the context of a loved one that I had lost. I mean how could losing someone possibly have been for the better? Then as time passed I began to realize that it isn't that the "loss" is for the better, rather it is what we ourselves manifest from the loss.

You see, at the moment we lose our loved one they are in a better place. It is us that are left to deal with things in our own way. It is through such trying times that we develop into the people that we are to become. Unfortunately the loss of those closest to us is as much a part of our life's journey as the experiencing of a new birth. I have found that while it never gets any easier to lose those that are closest to us, as time goes by we are healed! Each time a bit stronger and it is through this process that we ultimately become ready to deal with our own mortality.

All I can suggest is that we should try our best to find fulfillment in our lives. If you want something be willing to make it happen. While our lives take many winding roads they are still **ours** to command!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Daily Commentary

Congratulations it's a new day! - That's right friends, not only is it a new day, it is also, a new week! So treat it that way. The bad day you had on Friday is behind you.

The argument that you might have had with your loved ones, the test you might have failed! All these things are in the past! In other words no matter how much we might ponder them or wish they hadn't occurred there is simply nothing we can do about it!

However, viewed in the right light this can be a blessing. After all, now that we know we can't change the past we can realize that at this very moment we have the wonderful opportunity to begin a new! If you want something there is simply *no* better time than right now to pursue it!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Practice being an encourager! I have found that by adopting this attitude the overall quality of my life has improved for the better! How you might ask? Well aside from the wonderful feelings I get when I am able to encourage someone towards their goals. I have also been fortunate enough to receive referrals simply on the basis that someone thought that they could feel comfortable sending a friend or associate my way.

Friends it is a natural fact that with so many out there that are pessimistic if you can honestly implement this attitude into your daily life many blessings will naturally come your way! In a nutshell everyone wants to be lifted up! I assure you in your lifting up you will be lifted up in the process! Practice being a leader in everything that you do! -- It doesn't matter whether you are the CEO of a fortune five hundred company or the custodian at the local high school. Your job is extremely important!

And each day you are given the chance to be a unique example to someone that you will come into contact with. It is for this reason that we should practice certain characteristics. Always share a smile with those around you. When you walk into a room and everyone is keeping to themselves, be the first to introduce yourself, believe me everyone else wants to do the same and you will be appreciated by the group for having such qualities! Last but certainly not least, practice praising others for things they do well.

I can assure you that while you might not be in a leadership position now, these are just the qualities that will get you into one! ...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Mimic the successful! -- No I am not claiming that you do the same thing someone else has done. We all know that we have to come up with our own path toward success. However, what I am suggesting is that we can study the qualities that these successful people have in common!

Believe me one thing you will notice as you follow the successful is that they might have all taken different paths, but they share many of the same qualities! So here are a few ways that I keep an eye on these folks. First I read many business related periodicals, as well as reading auto-biographies, I find that many times the "biography" written by an outsider can tilt the story the way they want you to perceive the person. I also, watch a channel called A&E particularly a show called "Biography"!

And last but not least I spend *a lot* of time on the World Wide Web doing research! Please don't misunderstand me, upon following these peoples lives you will undoubtedly find qualities that you will find undesirable, the important thing is to identify their strong suits and try to implement those qualities into your daily life. Have a wonderful day!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

When you want something take the careful time to plan for its achievement. However, don't fall victim as so many do by over planning! It amazes me how many people tell me of this wonderful idea they have and yet later when I ask how they did with it they have yet to act upon it. I would urge you all that if you want something bad enough your going to have to get out of your comfort zone!

Use the power of Yes or No -- The other night I was chatting with a member of this list on ICQ ( ICQ is a free program that lets you chat in real time. And yes, I do have a very open door policy w/ everyone on this list :- ) My ICQ # is: 2940261).

It seems that the person was getting ready to go on a big sales appointment the following day and wanted to discuss it a bit. He was telling me all about the client, and the product he offered. Since he knew that I had previous experience in both sales and Management. He asked if I were him what sales speech would I go with? I have to tell you that I think my answer surprised him a bit.

I told him that since he obviously knew his product to a tee that the best thing to do was to simply review the benefits of his product and then ask the prospect point blank "Based on what I have told you about this do you think it is something that would be of benefit? Believe me I know that this might go against what many of you have heard about sales.

However, in my own experience I have found that *nothing* is more effective than reducing it down to a yes or no question. I told my friend that while he may get a no answer at least then he could have a chance to address the concerns of the prospect. You see using this technique you can avoid the possibility of a long drawn out decision making period.

As a worst case scenario the person will not want your product or service even after you counter their concerns. At least then you can begin to better focus your efforts on the next person. Remember success is a journey that is forged one step after another!

A similar situation happened with a friend that was concerned about a grade she had gotten on a test. It seemed that the test counted for a major portion of the overall class grade. Needless to say she was a bit worried. After talking for a bit I finally asked her "have you asked the teacher if you could do extra credit?" to which she said she had not. The next day she said that she and the professor had worked out a way for her and the class to earn extra points.

The key thing here is not that she had gotten another chance. Rather the lesson here is " you can't possibly expect to gain something if you don't first ask for it! After all the worst anyone can say is no...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds Go looking for opportunity! There is opportunity all around us, unfortunately we aren't always tuned into it. Make it a practice to continuously be on the lookout for new and interesting opportunities.

Be sure to tell those around you that you're always interested in advancement and would they please keep you in mind should they hear of anything. Share your network! -- I have two wonderful friends who might very well be considered the "masters of networking"! Their names are Claire Bellios who lives in Canada, and David Crawford of Tuscaloosa, AL.

The reason I mention them is that I find their networking skills to be so natural! You see they both make a constant effort to bring their friends and associates together. The interesting thing is that they don't do it for any gain, it's just that they enjoy their contacts and want to share them with their friends.

Some people think that contacts or prospects are to be hoarded away like hidden treasure, but I can assure you that both Dave and Claire's way of networking has been a very successful venture for all involved. The bottom line is that they realize that by sharing their contacts the folks they share with will be all the more likely to do the same with them. While it is true that we can't guaranty our the outcome of our ventures before hand, we can certainly take steps to increase our chances of achieving success! I have outlined a few of the steps here.

1) Plan for success - In today's fast paced world it is simply not enough to have a good idea. You have to dedicate the time to create a business plan (or success plan). Friends any venture (business or otherwise) will have its ups and downs. By having a carefully laid out plan you will better be able to identify the roads to take towards your success!

2) Be persistent! - Its a sad truth that many folks don't find success right off the bat. However, it is also true that with enough persistence success will find you!

3) Save some for that rainy day! - I can't stress this enough! If you want to be truly successful (meaning happy in your daily life) in your life you have got to have a nest egg. A friend once told me that the key to piece of mind lies in the ability to know that no matter what happens you always have a little something to fall back on!

Daily Commentary

In our busy lives it is far too easy to get caught up in the day to day. All our faults can easily get magnified in our own eyes.

Friends do as I try to do and step back, look at yourself in the mirror. If you really focus on yourself you can see that you truly are an amazing person! Think about it for a minute, of all the living things that we share this earth with, only we have the unique ability to rise above our current environment! For instance, if I am a farm animal or a wild animal in the jungle I can't very well do anything to get myself into a better situation can I? However, as living breathing human beings we can not only live fuller, richer lives, we also have the *unique* opportunity to lift those around us up as well!

Friends, if you don't like the path that your life is taking, believe it or not you *can* change it! I am not going to try to tell you that it will be easy. I don't believe that would be fair to you or me. What I will say is that many before you have chosen to take charge of their lives and careers rather than letting life lead them.

I hope that you would adopt this attitude, as I have found it to be *extremely* helpful in my never ending pursuit of success. When you read, watch TV, or hear about someone who has done something extraordinary, don't view them in awe and say to yourself "aren't they lucky?". Because friends there is absolutely no difference between you and that person. The difference can be summed up in one word "Action"! They saw their opportunity and they went for it. You can have the same achievements. It will take persistence and a *strong* will to succeed, but you can do it!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Be a friend to all! -- This is something that I try to practice every day. In my opinion it is one of the most rewarding things we can achieve in our lives.

Friends it takes a lot of work to be viewed in this light by others, but I assure you that you will find nothing more rewarding. You will find that when you are viewed in this light by your peers that more opportunities will come your way.

People will be naturally more attracted to you as a person. And far more importantly you will feel better about yourself as a whole. I promise it won't be easy, at times you might even feel as though your going against the grain. Whether or not we like to admit it sometimes we just don't feel very upbeat! The cause of our feelings are not near as important as us realizing that we can do something to combat these feelings. I am not going to promise you a end all for depression here, I think we have all heard that one before.

What I will say is that we can take several steps to actually reprogram ourselves with a more upbeat attitude. How you ask? Everyone of you will have to find out what works best for you, but hopefully my examples will lead you to this self discovery.

First I identify what the cause of the problem is, I don't dwell on it because this is only counter productive. Then I take the time to read some positive quotes, I have found that it is actually possible to overflow myself if I read enough of them :-)

Another tip I would suggest is to listen to some soothing music and give yourself a little time to think about all the positive experiences that have happened over the last week or so. What is success? Since I feel that this is something that one must decide on a personal level, rather than trying to identify it I will simply share my feelings on what I think constitutes success.

Today I was looking through the many thank you letters I have received from members of this list. One thing became extremely apparent. Simply put, since starting "The Inspiration a day!" list I have truly been blessed by being surrounded by success! So without further ado here goes my idea of success!...

Success is a friend who builds up others, and who's not afraid to tell people that he / she cares about or loves them. Success is a mother or a father that watch their child graduate from high school. Success is a teacher who prepares tomorrow's future! Success is a woman who despite a life threatening illness still finds the courage within herself to make a positive impact in others lives!

Success is a man who each day at his company meeting shares the power of motivational thinking to help ensure the success of his team! Success is a fellow who against what others said started a company and has seen it grow! Success is a college student who works and puts herself through school! Success is a woman who each day translates Motivational thinking into Spanish for her friends! Success is a coach who wants to see his team succeed and is willing to do what it takes to make them winners and prepare them for the future! Success is a man who lost his business, yet didn't give up and made his comeback!

Success is a lady who left her comfortable corporate job to open her own home based business! Success is a happy family! Success is a single mother or father who unselfishly sacrifices so that the children will not have to do without! Success is a woman who spreads motivation and works with disabled kids!

Friends, success comes to us in so many forms. The important thing is that we realize that while we may not always notice our successes, others do!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Things happen in our lives that can appear to have no rhyme or reason to them. For instance how many times have you done a thing and for whatever reason it didn't work out? Of course you have, we all have.

After the fact you might have even thought that it was a mistake to do so on your part. Well let me tell you that it wasn't! You have to be willing to let things play out to their fullest! Well it seems that summer is just about upon us, so I wanted to take a minute to tell all our student / graduating list members that I wish for them the best of success in all that lies in front of them!

If I had one bit of advice to share it would be a saying that my dad used to instill in my mind on almost a daily basis. He would say "Josh, life will offer you so many opportunities, but you have to be willing to be aware of them".

Friends, I promise in the next few months there will be many trials and tribulations to face. Some of you might be going straight into a new job that has been waiting on you, and there will be others that feel that the job outlook might seem hopeless at times. No matter what category you fall into now please remember that it is **only** now, and the now has very little to do with tomorrow!

Also, please know that should any of you need **any** advice, etc. that I am here should you need me. So without further ado make your mark on this world! I have no doubt that I will hear of you doing **many** amazing things in your lives. Please keep me posted...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

In our daily lives it is so easy for us to get down on ourselves about not being quite where we want to be. I know at times it is particularly hard for me, you see I am constantly trying to compare myself to my father who was already quite successful at my age (see <http://www.onlineconsulting.com/dad.htm> for his story).

Friends I have to remind myself almost everyday that no matter how hard I might try to mimic his success I will be unable to achieve it. One of the easiest roads to success is in doing that which you would do anyway! When I first heard this I used to ponder it deeply. Now I see proof of this everyday. You see this is the exact way I started "The Motivational Mecca!"

I started it simply because I am a strong believer in motivational thinking. When I began it was simply as a way to share the best sites with motivational content. Now it has grown to so much more! It has grown into a wonderful community of like minded friends. It has truly been a blessing to me. In the last year we have seen the site add a chat room, and a On-line Motivational bookstore!

Soon we will be expanding to include a section that features motivational short stories and poems. What makes me most excited is that soon we will be doing a weekly interview with selected motivational speakers and other successful people from various walks of life.

Friends the most amazing thing about this all is that it has all happened because I would continue to do this even if it had never grown! I would do it because this is what I love...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Hardly a day goes by that most of us don't hear the saying "study your failures so that we don't make the same mistake twice".

While I don't dispute that this is a wonderful piece of advice what I find interesting is that there's a saying that is equally as important, yet is seldom heard. That is the idea of taking the time to pat ourselves on the back for a job well done!

I am not suggesting that we should do this in public. That behavior is obviously a no, no. However, I am a strong believer in that we should take a private moment to ponder our successes, explore the event and the steps we took that lead to the achievement. I have found that it is when we recognize our individual successes that we build the needed momentum that will drive us towards our next goal!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Take time to recuperate! If there is one thing I would encourage you to do it would be to at least take one day a week to invest in your own sanity! Friends, those who know me best might say "Josh isn't that calling the kettle black?" The reason is that I have been known to burn *many* a midnight oil working on project after project.

However, recently I have come to realize that I simply have to give myself a little time to recover from the previous week! You see while we may not believe it our bodies simply aren't made to run 90 to nothing! When looking to pursue a new venture be sure to ask the advice of those who have already succeeded in a similar venture.

We all have that need to have those that are closest to us to approve of what we want to achieve. However, the sad fact in many cases is that most folks just won't see things our way!

In many cases it isn't that they don't want us to succeed, rather it is just that they are basing their advice on their own inability to dream goals as big as our own!

One of the most powerful things I have been able to do is to develop my network on a daily basis. What's a network you ask? Simply put it is everyone you have come into contact with.

I have found that so many new opportunities come my way by simply developing my internal network. While each of us has somewhat of a network already it is possible to actually harvest your network. How you ask? The simplest thing I can suggest is to think beyond your own motives when developing your network.

For instance, the next time a friend asks you for a favor or tells you about an opportunity they heard about rather than simply thinking it's not something that you're interested in, think about your network and see if it might be something that's of interest to someone you know. In doing this you will be growing your network far and wide, and in doing this success is never far behind!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Well by now I am sure that you have figured out that today's commentary is going to deal with "Action". Friends I find most often that one word tends to be the most common missing ingredient in peoples (and my own :-)) lack of success.

When I was first introduced to the world of business (in my fathers business) at the age of 16 I learned very quickly the power of action! You see like most small businesses our success (or lack there of) depended solely on our ability to lay a plan into action and put it into place as rapidly as possible.

Recently I have found that these valuable skills are serving me well in my most recent venture. You see we took the time to make a plan, but we also made it a *special* point to add a time frame to the plan! This is a common missing ingredient I have found.

You see by including a time frame we were able to better interject "action" into the goals of the venture. Its important to note that while I really had no way for sure of knowing whether the venture would be successful or not I did know that if "action" wasn't taken then it certainly wouldn't succeed!.

I am happy to report that in the last three days we have exceeded out projected goal. Friends the key here is that we chose to plan , but not plan ourselves out of action! The bottom line is that no matter how much you plan your goal you'll have to leave room for it to change as its needed!

And above all else, once you get that basic plan laid down your next step has got to be to just get started!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Keep your eyes open to new opportunity! Whether or not we realize it each day affords us a new chance to take steps towards our own success.

All too often what happens is that we aren't aware of the fact that new possibilities are being continuously introduced to us. I have found that by making a quick note of that passing thought I am able to review these ideas at a later point (particularly that night).

In doing this I can sort through them and implement the ones that I want to incorporate into my daily action plan...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds Embrace Failure! -- Recently I was reading an issue of "Fast Company" (I enjoy these types of magazines because they tend to highlight those that have achieved various successes in their lives) and I ran across an article about the J. Peterman Co. What caught my eye was that Mr. Peterman the founder called "Failure his best teacher".

What I found fascinating was that he said that when he was raising capital to start the J. Peterman Co. the venture capitalists he talked with all wanted to know one common question, "had he ever failed at anything"!

You see these folks who make a living at picking the best companies didn't see failure as a weakness, instead they reasoned that anyone who hadn't previously come back from a down time probably didn't have what it takes to build a successful business. Now I have to tell you that really sent me doing some research, and sure enough if you check around you will be hard pressed to find someone who has found success on that first try! Instead what you're sure to find lots of folks who just wouldn't take *no* for an answer.

Lets look at this outside of the realm of business for a second. Take for example the game of baseball. It is a fact that most major league home run hitters strike out many more times than they get hits, but when they get that hit it more than makes up for their low hit ratio. The fact is that each of us have so much more ability than we can even fathom!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Friends to have goals is simply not enough to guarantee our success! There is a very important ingredient that must be mixed in as well.

Each day we must make a to do list, on it be sure to include at least three things you will need to do to achieve your bigger goals. It's true that Rome wasn't built in a day, and the same holds true with our own dreams.

Give your goals substance -- Setting goals is wonderful, it confirms that we have taken that first step towards what we desire in our lives. However, we can't stop there!

The next step is for us to actually visualize ourselves reaching our goals. It is in visualization that we can actually program ourselves to reach that which we desire. Friends, its one thing for us to say "I want to get that dream job". And quite another to say "In my dream job I will be in charge of marketing at a growth oriented company".

Do you see the difference that a little visualization can play in making our goals more "concrete" in our minds? To say I want to find my dream job is one thing, but to identify it and imagine myself doing this job creates an energy in me to make it a reality!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Combat your "Bad Days" -- That's right believe it or not yours truly admits that he has "bad day's" ☺ Whether or not we want to admit it sometimes we all have those feelings that our situation could be better (for some it's even a feeling of hopelessness).

Friends, there are those who would claim that all we need do is to simply convince ourselves that things aren't so bad! and poof! we will feel magically better :-). I can personally tell you that for some folks its just not that easy :-). However, fortunately I can also say that its *not* hopeless either!

The key is that we must be able to come to grips with the very thing that is the cause of our feelings. This is best done through our taking time to think and meditate on the things that are bothering us. In doing this identify the true root of your feelings.

After doing this be sure to commit it to paper! After doing this I get a much clearer picture of the magnitude of my feelings. As I am sure most of you agree, it is at the very point that we ponder these thoughts that they begin to run wild in our minds.

By narrowing them down to paper we can better tame them and get that *necessary* sense of the true magnitude of them. Upon completing this list we must take a little time identify things that we can do to combat these feelings. For instance today I had a bit of a feeling that I was overburdened by projects that I *needed* to complete.

Upon following the steps outlined above I was able to look at both the first list and then the second list. I can tell you that I found a feeling of comfort because my second list revealed the steps that I could take to help me reduce the problems that I faced which were right in front of me on my first list...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Friends our own successes can be directly linked to our ability to positively impact those around us! So many of us look for ways to benefit ourselves first.

I truly believe that a far easier path towards attaining your goals is to develop your individual goals around bettering the lives of those around you! In doing this you will *quickly* realize that many will come to your side and recognize your efforts.

In my own business we have adopted a sense of community. The number one priority is to give a total customer experience! And number two is to give everyone in the organization a chance to better the overall quality of their life!

In this day and age of complex Mission Statements ours is straight and to the point. We care about those that we do business with and we care about those that make up our organization!

Daily Commentary

I used to be notorious for second guessing my own ability to make informed decisions until I ran across an interesting article. It seemed that the writer told of a story where a business person was undergoing the same type situation in their life. They decided to keep a daily log of this. After a month of tracking all her decisions the end results showed that overwhelmingly her initial decisions were for the best!

This points out in my opinion two very interesting things. First, we all have a very unique ability to make the right decisions most of the time. And secondly, even if we make a bad decision there is very little that we can do after the fact! That is look at how much time we are wasting in allowing ourselves to ponder our past decisions.

Each day our motivational community is blessed with new readers, and for that I am very thankful. Today I was reminded of how our little community was started and figured that I would recount its undertaking for all of the new readers ☺.

You see friends, I have been a big believer in motivational thinking since I was about 16 years old. Not long after I began my Inspirational reading I became a bit infatuated with the idea of one day being a Motivational Speaker.

Well, the years passed and as time went on I never lost site of that dream. I will admit however that at times the prospect of reaching this goal has seemed a bit daunting. It seemed that the more I researched the idea of breaking into the "Motivational Industry" the harder it seemed. There were numerous requests on my part and it seemed time after time I was met with a resounding **no** (but good luck to you, Josh).

Then the idea hit me that there had to be a way to get my message out myself ☺. Thus "The Inspiration a Day!" was born! You see I figured that if I couldn't make my way into the industry by conventional means that I would simply create my own doorway in.

Friends, I'll be the first to admit that before sending out that first list I was scared to death! Thoughts ran rampant through my mind such as "Who do you think you are to try this when others haven't?" or "What if no one likes what you have to say?".

After spending countless hours re-writing that first list I sent it out! To all two of the folks who had expressed interest! :-)) To say that the first one was awkward would be an understatement! However, I had made my mind up that at least if I fell flat on my face it was better to know then never to have tried!

Well, friends I am happy to report that today we have 804 subscribers getting that very same "Inspiration a Day!" and not a day goes by that I am not able to greet a new member to our motivational community!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

So many times it isn't until after a major event in our lives takes place that we come to realize that it played such a big part in our life's progress. For me such an event was when I lost a friend whom I had dated for some time.

I cared so much for her and throughout the relationship we had shared so much that when it was over I couldn't make sense of it at first. The question kept running through my mind "why had I spent so much time with this person yet in the end it appears that it was all in vain".

The answer that I came to at that time was so wrong that I simply had to comment on it today! You see, it wasn't in vain at all! Upon reflection I have come to realize that each of us were going through difficult times in our lives. You see in reality we had both been paired together by a force so much wiser than either of us!

Now I am able to look back and realize all the *good* that came from my time with her. While it wasn't meant to last I do have memories that can never be taken from me. And perhaps best of all that relationship has taught me that there will come a time when I will find someone else that I can regain that feeling for. I have to tell you that it really gets me excited to think that at any minute without so much as a warning it will happen again.

Last but certainly not least I am thankful for the strength that I gained as a result of dealing with the of loss that was associated with the breakup. You see I realize now that relationships just as life is a fragile thing and as such must be handled with kid gloves. Friends, I never stop for a minute now to tell those closest to me that they are appreciated! May you find the one that you are looking for in your life...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

I discuss a lot about playing to your strengths in order to achieve success. Along the same lines I feel it extremely important that we *all* identify the very essence of what it is that really motivates us.

Personally I have always had an interest in business. When I first started out I used to focus on the more superficial side of things. For instance, I used to be a lot more "bottom line" oriented. Don't get me wrong I have always tried to be extra supportive of members of the organization. It was just that I hadn't grasped my own personal feeling for what the organization's true purpose was.

You see, I used to use profitability as the basis for which I measured the success of the organization. While I will certainly agree that it is important I am happy to say that I have broadened my thinking a bit.

Friends there are so many more ingredients that must come into play in order for a company (or ourselves) to be truly successful. You see I view our organization as a living thing, that is I try to make it a direct extension of everyone in it. In practicing this it becomes obvious that if someone is unhappy it *will* have a direct effect on the company as a whole.

True success in my eye's lies beyond the bottom line. In a nutshell the best part about adopting this way of thinking is that considering everyone in this way the organization has no choice but to wind up with positive results. Simply put, implement a "win, win" environment and there are no limits to what you can achieve. At our organization we try to place a direct incentive for everyone to contribute.

We have a simple mission, to offer an enjoyable environment where everyone is appreciated for their efforts. Does this mean that everything is wonderful with no bumps along the way? Of course not, just like any other growing company we have our share of trials and tribulations. The difference is that together as a team we have been able to overcome these things in an efficient manner. May you find success in your daily life!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Friends, more often than not we give up on our goals right before we cross that invisible threshold that leads to our achievement. Always keep in mind that persistence is the key to finding success in your life!

Often it is the ability to continue on towards our goals when others doubt us that many times separates success from failure. Achievement isn't something that is promised to us. Many times it even takes more than one attempt before it finds us. However, the fact remains that if you give up without trying that one last time, you very well may be just missing your goals!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Before I ever set out to do anything whether business related or in my personal life I try to answer the following question, "Does what I am planning to do fit into my overall goals, or is it simply short term thinking that is motivating me towards this?".

The key here is that I have taken the time to plan my long term goals. Since life is a constant change I find that loosely planning can better keep me in tune with that which I want out of my life.

Friends, don't be afraid of the change's that occur in your life, but, at the same time you must take care to keep yourself on course with your goals! Having a plan and working that plan can better keep us on track in our lives...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Live your life knowing that with each new day you **will** encounter at least one new opportunity to advance your current position in life! You might be saying "How do you know this?" I can say this because I see things manifest in my own life each day!

Does that mean that I am always tuned in to them while they're happening? Of course not (by the way if anyone out there can do that please share your secret :-). However, upon my reflection of the days events I can see many of these things as they had been presented to me.

For me the important thing is that upon my reflection I don't regret **any** of the missed opportunities. I simply make myself aware of the fact that they were sent my way.

Define your life goal! What is a life goal? I am sure that many of you have goals, and that is great ,but life goals are the same as our *long term* goals. That it is by determining my life goals I can make better decisions with regards to my short term goals.

Life goals are not to be taken lightly. They should be totally in line with your values! Your overall being. In aligning your life goals with your natural abilities I believe that we can actually steer our lives on the course we want it to take.

Personally my life goal is to create opportunity for those around me. That is to positively impact those I am fortunate enough to come into contact with.

After identifying my life goal I have a standard to measure the importance of my short term goals. For instance if I have an idea and after measuring it to see that it fits into my life goal and if it doesn't then the idea is forgotten. I record the idea along with the reason I passed on it, and simply move forward with my daily routine. Let me start out by telling everyone how good it is to be back! While I had a *magnificent* vacation which I will share a bit with you all. I must say that I did miss each and everyone of you! I consider each member of our motivational community as an extended part of my family. I hope that everyone has had a good week and are getting geared up for another wonderful one ;-)

Now for a bit about my trip. This past week I was fortunate enough to spend some time with a person that could very well be one of the most naturally compassionate people I have ever met. Friends, how many of you have ran across the kind of person that know matter what they are faced with they *always* seem to be looking out for the other person?

Well, I am happy to say that it has given me a wonderful new perspective on things in my own life. in watching this person in action I couldn't help but notice that while she gave of her self unexpectedly for the benefits of those in need others seemed to flock to her. It was truly a witness to me that the saying holds true "Success is most naturally achieved by giving freely of yourself, without expecting anything in return"...Once again it is great to be back!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

I love to study the stories of great achievers, however I must say that the power in doing so has been much more effective since I have adopted this simple attitude.

Always keep in the top of your mind that there is absolutely *no* difference between you and the person that you're reading about's ability to achieve success!

Look at these people for what they are, as mentors and not people to look upon as special achievers! Friends it is a fact of life that with enough ambition we too can achieve personal success in our lives!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

Daily Commentary

Very few ingredients are as common as blind faith when it comes to reading about the so called "Successful". However, blind faith is rarely so blind upon further research, simply put be sure to plan for your success. Follow these steps to help yourself succeed in your next venture.

Plan - Before I do anything I make a short action plan (keeping in mind that it can and will vary from time to time). That is, I outline the things that I want to achieve and the steps that I must take for me to get started.

Do I believe in this? - I always measure everything according to my "life goals". If it doesn't fit in with the bigger picture (my life goals) then I just don't pursue it. To do so would be short term thinking (which I believe can be disastrous). I always ask this question "would I do this even if I weren't going to get paid?" This sounds crazy ,but in many cases when starting a new venture it can take a while to get it going. By first answering this question I can assure myself that I won't get disenchanted before my achievement takes hold!

Keep the 'belief' level high! - I find that as long as I practice the above list this part is relatively easy. I take the time to review my "plan" regularly to stay better focused on the goal at hand.

May you all find success in that which you strive for....Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

I talk a lot about personal success, which I do feel very strongly about; however, equally important is our own ability to encourage those around us! If I had to attribute one thing to my personal feeling of achievement it wouldn't be anything I have, nor anything I set out to accomplish on a material level, rather it would be the wonderful treasures I get from everyone on the list that have told me that the IAD has impacted them in some way.

This simple pleasure could not be attained by any other way than to truly believe in and appreciate all of you who share in reading this list. I would encourage everyone to at least tell someone around you how much they are appreciated...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

A Better Week's Checklist -- Yes, I do mark these off as I practice them ☺

1. Smile at a stranger - This can go very far in bettering someone else's day! Practice it and you'll see it come back to you.
2. Encourage your peer's - We all long for encouragement in our lives. This comes natural to great leaders, but it can be acquired through practice.
3. Be a good finder - This fits right along with the above tip. The world is full of negativity, practice this and you'll see a major change in the way you're viewed by your peers.
4. Set weekly goals! - Navigators know that the wind changes constantly, by planning they make sure that the wind stays in their sails. Weekly goals will help you to stay better focused on your target.
5. Read motivational content daily! - Each day we have a choice, that is to become consumed by the negativity that surrounds us or we can counter that by taking in more positive content! I am not saying to be blind to what's going on around us, what I am saying is that we need to be careful not to overlook the positives in our lives!

Hope this helps...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

One of the most fortunate things I have tried implement in my life is the art (or willingness) to delegate. This is something that in many small organizations (and peoples lives) that far too often overlooked.

I was fortunate to have been involved in a family business at a rather young age. By far one of the most important things was the importance of practicing delegation. While the business was very successful I also saw first hand the often unneeded stress that can be placed on an environment when its leader tries to takes on the burden of all aspects of the business.

I promised myself that rather than go that route I would live by a simple rule. I will always try to work with those that are better at something than myself. Daily Commentary

You have a choice! - Such powerful words that no doubt we have all heard time and time again. However, I believe it is worth another mention.

Inevitably there are those that clearly have not made the choice to be where they are at in their life! The wonderful truth is that where you are now has absolutely nothing to do with where you can end up! Listen carefully, everyone (even you!) deserves to be happy in what they do each day!

Unfortunately in many cases the foreseeable consequences of making the necessary changes appear to be too much risk for us to take on, therefore many choose to stay right on the path that they are on! Don't get me wrong I am the first to admit that change is scary. By the same token I can assure you that if you continue to choose the unhappy path that you are on you will keep on getting what you have!

The simple truth is that change can be hard, and anyone that tells you that it won't come with sacrifice is simply not shooting you straight! I am reminded of a time in my life where I had become a bit complacent. I was working in the family business, things were good ,but I had an overwhelming feeling that I needed to make my own place in life.

I left and moved several states away. I worked in a job that I wasn't particularly happy with (but I knew it was what I had to do at the time). Over the course of time new opportunities opened up for me. I relocated back to Tuscaloosa, AL (my home) wound up in a Computer company. From there I opened up my own consulting business. And as a result the very list that you are reading was born!

The bottom line is that the choice I had to make was very difficult, but I did it! And as a direct result of my willingness to leave my "comfort zone" my world has been opened up to new and fascinating opportunities! The fact is that it was hard! At times I wanted to turn back. However, now I can say without a doubt that I am so thankful that I didn't!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds had to spend all his time flat on his back. The men talked for hours on end. They spoke of their wives and families, their homes, their jobs, their involvement in the military service, where they had been on vacation. And every afternoon when the man in the bed by the window could sit up, he would pass the time by describing to his room-mate all the things he could see outside the window.

The man in the other bed began to live for those one-hour periods where his world would be broadened and enlivened by all the activity and color of the world outside. The window overlooked a park with a lovely lake. Ducks and swans played on the water while children sailed their model boats. Flowers of every color of the rainbow would flicker in the wind. Grand old trees graced the landscape, and a fine view of the city skyline could be seen in the distance.

As the man by the window described all this in exquisite detail, the man on the other side of the room would close his eyes and imagine the picturesque scene. One warm afternoon the man by the window described a circus passing by. Although the other man couldn't hear the animals - he could see it in his mind's eye as the gentleman by the window portrayed it with descriptive words. Then unexpectedly, a sinister thought entered his mind. Why should the other man alone experience all the pleasures of seeing everything while he himself never got to see anything? It didn't seem fair.

At first thought the man felt ashamed. But as the days passed and he missed seeing more sights, his envy eroded into resentment and soon turned him sour. He began to brood and he found himself unable to sleep. He should be by that window - that thought, and only that thought now controlled his life.

Late one night as he lay staring at the ceiling, the man by the window began to cough. He was choking on the fluid in his lungs. The other man watched in the dimly lit room as the struggling man by the window groped for the button to call for help. Listening from across the room he never moved, never pushed his own button which would have brought the nurse running in. In less than five minutes the coughing and choking stopped, along with that the sound of breathing. Now there was only silence—deathly silence.

The following morning the day nurse arrived to bring water for their baths. When she found the lifeless body of the man by the window, she was saddened and called the hospital attendants to take it away. As soon as it seemed appropriate, the other man asked if he could be moved next to the window.

The nurse was happy to make the switch, and after making sure he was comfortable, she left him alone. Slowly, painfully, he propped himself up on one elbow to take his first look at the world outside. Finally, he would have the joy of seeing it all himself. He strained to slowly turn to look out the window beside the bed. It faced a blank wall. The man asked the nurse what could have compelled his deceased roommate who had described such wonderful things outside this window. The nurse responded that the man was blind and could not even see the wall. She said, "Perhaps he just wanted to encourage you."

Epilogue. . . You can interpret the story in any way you like. But one moral stands out: There is tremendous happiness in making others happy, despite our own situations. Shared grief is half the sorrow, but happiness when shared, is doubled. If you want to feel rich, just count all of the things you have that money can't buy.

While it's certainly true that some things definitely weren't by design and it's likely that had I had an alternative I wouldn't have chosen a few of them.

The inevitable still exists. That is that each of the choices that I made along the way (albeit some a bit blindly...lol) have all gone into shaping the very point that I am at in my life.

I am reminded of this very list. Simply starting out as a way for a few to share ideas. And the most I hoped for was for myself and a few others to gain a bit more motivation in our daily lives. I look at the way things have gone and I can't help but be amazed at the way that this list has grown!

I find the above quotes to be very interesting. Not just because of the folks who said them or even on there face value ,but more so because of the common thread that seems to run between them.

That is each of them is great in their own right, yet they seem to have a thorough understanding of the fact that failure or at least less than spectacular performance are inevitable. Even more so it seems to me that they have come to the understanding that failure (or lack of success) in something is as much a part of the natural growth process as the achievement itself is.

complaining, I can choose to accept their complaining or I can point out the positive side of life. I choose the positive side of life."

"Yeah, right, it's not that easy," I protested. "Yes, it is," Jerry said. "Life is all about choices. When you cut away all the junk, every situation is a choice. You choose how you react to situations. You choose how people will affect your mood. You choose to be in a good mood or bad mood. The bottom line: It's your choice how you live life." I reflected on what Jerry said. Soon thereafter, I left the restaurant industry to start my own business. We lost touch, but I often thought about him when I made a choice about life instead of reacting to it.

Several years later, I heard that Jerry did something you are never supposed to do in a restaurant business: he left the back door open one morning and was held up at gunpoint by three armed robbers. While trying to open the safe, his hand, shaking from nervousness, slipped off the combination. The robbers panicked and shot him. Luckily, Jerry was found relatively quickly and rushed to the local trauma center. After 18 hours of surgery and weeks of intensive care, Jerry was released from the hospital with fragments of the bullets still in his body.

I saw Jerry about six months after the accident. When I asked him how he was, he replied, "If I were any better, I'd be twins. Wanna' see my scars?" I declined to see his wounds, but did ask him what had gone through his mind as the robbery took place. "The first thing that went through my mind was that I should have locked the back door," Jerry replied. "Then, as I lay on the floor, I remembered that I had two choices: I could choose to live, or I could choose to die. I chose to live." "Weren't you scared? Did you lose consciousness?" I asked. Jerry continued, "The paramedics were great. They kept telling me I was going to be fine. But when they wheeled me into the emergency room and I saw the expressions on the faces of the doctors and nurses, I got really scared. In their eyes, I read, 'He's a dead man.' "I knew I needed to take action."

"What did you do?" I asked. "Well, there was a big, burly nurse shouting questions at me," said Jerry. "She asked if I was allergic to anything. 'Yes,' I replied. The doctors and nurses stopped working as they waited for my reply. I took a deep breathe and yelled, 'Bullets!' Over their laughter, I told them. 'I am choosing to live. Operate on me as if I am alive, not dead.'" Jerry lived thanks to the skill of his doctors, but also because of his amazing attitude. I learned from him that every day we have the choice to live fully. Attitude, after all, is everything. -- Brian Cavanaugh (A Cup of Chicken Soup for the Soul)

Grandmother's Vase

One day I was lying on the bed, reading, when my mother came into the room. She held out a vase--a rather ugly vase. She asked, 'Would you like to have this vase?' "I replied quickly, 'No, I don't want it.'

"As she turned to walk away, I picked up something that said to me, 'Wait a minute, don't shut this off yet.' So I asked, 'Where did you get it?'

"She said, 'Oh, I got it when I filled an order.' Filled an order? I thought--no communication here. So I asked, 'What do you mean, filled an order?'

'Well,' she said, 'when I was a little girl, the Smith Company mailed catalogs to people. I would take the catalog around the neighborhood, and I'd get people to order from it. When I filled an order and sent it in, they gave me a prize. One time, I got a porch swing for my family.'

"Now you have to understand," said Hensley, "that my mother is 81 years old. She is one of six children in a family that her father deserted when she was quite young. Money was real hard to come by. My grandmother managed to keep the family together through the years, although I don't know how.

For my mother to win a luxury like a porch swing was a significant accomplishment. Although she no longer had the swing, she had the vase—a vase full of meaning--which she offered to me. Instantly I said, 'Mom, I want the vase.' Now it sits in a prominent place in my living room. It symbolizes a precious meaning which my mother and I share: Unless you and I are sensitive to the other person and hear meaning, we may well have a communication problem.

Just Listen

I suspect that the most basic and powerful way to connect to another person is to listen. Just listen. Perhaps the most important thing we ever give each other is our attention. And especially if it's given from the heart. When people are talking, there's no need to do anything but receive them. Just take them in. Listen to what they're saying. Care about it. Most times caring about it is even more important than understanding it. Most of us don't value ourselves or our love enough to know this. It has taken me along time to believe in the power of the simple saying, "I'm so sorry," when someone is in pain. And meaning it.

One of my patients told me that when she tried to tell her story people often interrupted to tell her that they once had something just like that happen to them. Subtly her pain became a story about themselves. Eventually she stopped talking to most people. It was just too lonely. We connect through listening. When we interrupt what someone is saying to let them know that we understand, we move the focus of attention to ourselves. When we listen, they know we care. Many people with cancer can talk about the relief of having someone just listen.

I have even learned to respond to someone crying by just listening. In the old days I used to reach for the tissues, until I realized that passing a person a tissue may be just another way to shut them down, to take them out of their experience of sadness and grief. Now I just listen. When they have cried all they need to cry, they find me there with them.

This simple thing has not been that easy to learn. It certainly went against everything I had been taught since I was very young. I thought people listened only because they were too timid to speak or did not know the answer. A loving silence often has far more power to heal and to connect than the most well intentioned words.

Hello Friends!

Relish in the fact that you are an incredible person! You don't believe me? I challenge you to look around you today, look at the many positive things that have happened in your life! Look beyond your shortcomings, these are the easy things to notice! Instead focus on your family, friends, job, etc. Many of them are unique to you! That is that no one else is exactly as you are! Explore this it's amazing!

Upon looking at your life I hope you will further ponder the ideas you have or have had, the simple fact is that if you can dream them then it is equally likely to be within your power to achieve these things! I hope that you will do as I do and at least spend a portion of each day trying to be the change you want to see in your life!...Your friend in cyberspace, Josh Hinds

A note From Josh Hinds

I sincerely hope that you have enjoyed the excerpts from the Inspiration a Day! They were taken over the course of a little over a year, so I feel comfortable in saying that it pretty much reflects what was happening in my daily life at the time.

It is truly a living journal of sorts, an on going adventure in my life and the lives of those I come into contact with on a daily basis.

I am certain that one thing was evident in my daily commentary. That is that I truly believe in building genuine relationships with those that we come into contact with. I was fortunate to see first hand how this can make a difference in our lives.

I will never forget the time shortly after losing my father, it seemed that things were going topsy turvey in my own life. However, I still find to this day how amazing it is that at just the right moment someone whom new my father would come into my life. Upon careful reflection I can remember so vividly the numerous bits of advice that were sprinkled on me at just the right time.

It seems funny now how things tend to come together when it seems lost. Why did these things happen? The question could certainly be speculated, but I personally believe it was a direct result of the kind of persona that my father was. You see my dad was the kind of person that was always there for you. Never one to draw attention to his caring side, but always there at the same time.

I can't help but believe in the saying "you reap what you sow". Some might simply view this as nonsense and for that you're certainly entitled to your opinion ,but being there first hand I can tell you at times I new there was certainly a guardian angel near.

I look back at the year or so after my father's passing and I can see an amazing growth that took place in my personal life. I find it interesting that each choice I made along the way seems to have at least some tie to where I am now. Did I make bad choices? Don't we all? The question should be asked is if I had to do it all over again would I, and to this I give a resounding yes!

I would challenge anyone reading this at this very moment to sit the book down for a bit and ponder this question for a minute. Look beyond your immediate failures, the lost opportunities and look at what you have accomplished! The good things that have happened in your life. The children you raised, the new job you once loved. The business that you chose to enter into.

Upon pondering these tings try and gain a true sense of what it was like to feel happiness about these things. You see, this feeling was there at one time. Now what is important is that you can regain this sense of fulfillment and apply it to another area of your life. Friends we have so many choices in our lives. I hear so often about the person that isn't happy in their job. They say they would like to quit and start a business of their own. However, they can't afford the loss of income that this would result in doing so.

To this I say "congratulations"! Why congratulations? Because you are already a good way towards achieving your goal! You see you have had a vision that you want more from your life. The next step in your achievement is that you must now be willing to take that first step towards it!

All too often this is the missed step in the process of success. You have the vision but you don't act on it. You see that first step doesn't have to be a hard one. For instance substitute the idea of quitting your job to start the business with the idea of instead continuing your job and working the business in your off time. The idea sounds so simple but you'd be surprised how many don't take this simple step towards achieving that which they want from their life. Some would say that taking this route would make the venture move slower, to this I would say you're exactly right, but it certainly would not be any slower than the path that you're on right now, would it?

Friends all too often it's not some mystical word of wisdom that will give you the personal success that you want in your life. No, plain and simple it lies in your own ability to make your dreams meet your willingness to work towards them.

Sometimes I am simply amazed at what the human spirit is capable of. I would challenge you to find any other thing that is responsible for as many positive things that happen as that of the human spirit. What else in history has created new governments? Taken someone from a simple idea to a global corporation? Raised, clothed, and fed hungry children? Given ever freely of its time so that others with lesser resources could have a better life? I ask of you what else gives someone the strength to fight for one's country? Or has the miraculous ability to love another? Do you see what I mean? The human spirit is a mighty powerful thing. Even more important is that it lies within each and everyone one of us!

What tends to happen however is that over time we can lose contact with our own human spirit. That is that over time we lose our ability to let our spirit actually drive us like it should. It's important to note that any number of things can play a part in this process. The result often leaves us with a feeling of hopelessness. Friends, I would like to say one thing before getting any deeper into this discussion, That is that these feelings are very common! I think many of us would be hard pressed to find that we can't identify at least one area where this has happened in our own lives.

The important thing is that we take the time to carefully identify with these feelings. Even more importantly that we combat these feelings of hopelessness with positive ones! While I will be the first to agree that we can't erase life's negative events, luckily at the same time we don't have to sit idly by and let these feelings consume us. By now I am sure your asking if that's so then what do you suggest? To that I say the answer lies in making list! That's right friends make a list of your past personal successes. Study this list regularly. You see in doing this we can actually program our subconscious mind. This in turn will create a snowballing effect in you. Lets explore this simple technique for a minute.

Look at your so called bad days. In most cases you will notice that there was one single event that happened to cause you to focus on a negative. As a direct result the next thing while not necessarily so bad was noticed more simply because of the first bad thing that happened to you. Do you see the pattern here? I am talking about the same snowballing effect. What I propose is to use the same technique by first introducing the positives into your life. Here's a handy quote that I try to remind myself to use the previous technique...Success Begets success.
